CONTROL EVERYTHING

A Gateway to a Smarter World

Over the past few years, the number of smart home solutions has grown significantly. There is nothing left to be automated; home climate, lighting, sensors, and many other details of the space around you can be controlled smartly.

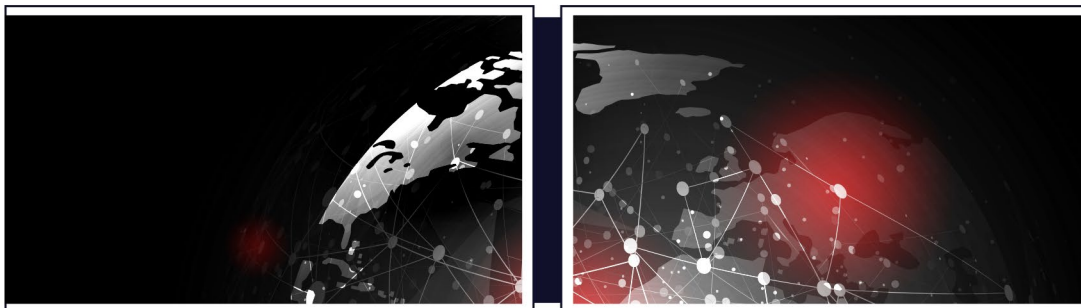

To make this control even smoother, some devices make the communication among these components even more harmonious.

The Zigbee Gateway is one of these devices; its main function is to help solutions of different brands understand a common language.

TIS BEE

In other words, to have a fully smart home, you can add a Zigbee Gateway to your TIS-powered home and your solutions will work and communicate better.

This gateway transfers data between ZigBee devices on the TIS network.

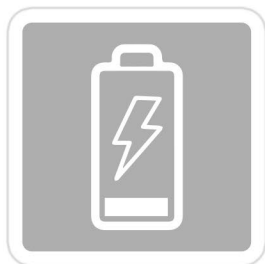

. A time and cost-efficient smart home, a perfectly connected set of devices that work flawlessly within a short period, and battery-powered devices that don't require constant maintenance are some of the benefits of adding a Zigbee Gateway to your home automation.

What do we mean when we say everything is connected? Well, imagine that when you wake up in the morning, your bedroom blinds automatically open and the coffee machine turns on. You decide to take a shower to cheer up, and the bathroom lights turn on for you, as the motion detector in the hallway has informed the bathroom that you're coming.

It's like the information about you waking up is shared among devices, so everything is done for you in advance.

The Zigbee Gateway also allows remote access via the Internet or smartphone even when you are away from home, but that is not the only great thing about this device.

Your power consumption is reduced significantly, and wireless sensors can be set up to work for a long time on a single battery.

With this Gateway, there is no barrier to communication among your smart home solutions, and a limitlessly intelligent home is central to what TIS offers.
